The National Party. The Pro-Slavery organs claim that the Democratic party is the National party. The opponents of slavery-extension claim that it is national only in its support of slavery, and in its persevering endeavors to make slavery a national institution. In the year of the annexation of Texas, the Whigs charged the Democratic party with being pro slavery, and the events that followed, proved the truth of the charge. Texas was brought into the Union for no other purpose than to extend the area of slave territory, and the Democratic members, north and south, in a solid body, voted for and passed the bill. A Democratic Administration, sustained by a Democratic majority in Congress, declared war against Mexico, conquered a part of its territory with the avowed purpose of adding new Slave

Democratic members in Congress, north and south, voted for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise; a Democratic majority passed the bill, and a Democratic President sustains all measures, lawful and unlawful, which are taken to force Slavery into the territory laid open by the striking down of the Compromise Line. Not one single northern Whig voted for the repeal, and scarcely a single northern Democrat cast his vole against it. Not an act of the party party act, which has not been just in accordance with the demands of slavery: not an act which has had for its end and aim the good of the whole country, north and south. Every man who dures to express an opinion in favor of freedom in the territories, of hostility to the extension of slavery, is not acknowledged as itself. belonging to the party at all, and if he is an office-holder, he is turned out forth-

The Democratic party is simply the party of Slavery. It has no other prominent characteristic. It has no other touch-stone by which to try the fitness of a man for office-no other article in its creed which cannot be bent, changed or entirely stricken out. It is no longer a National party, but has been sold, body and soul, to slavery and sectionalism, for the promise of office and power. But the Republican party is national in all its ends and aims. It wars upon of the National Era, "it would take the house; The Post Mistress, power, not from southern men, but from slavery men. It would shut Federal ter ritory, not against freemen from the north, but against slaves. It would establish a principle important to all interests, all sections; and exclude a principle injurious to all sections and all interests. Its policy recognized in the Federal territory, no citizen of a free or slave state would be shut out; men from all sections might freely enter, and all stand upon a platform of perfect equality. Its policy repudiated, and the settlement within it of slave holders with their slaves, would virtually exclude all free laboring men." Pro-Slavery croakers tell us that if the principles of the Republican party are carried out, there will be a civil war .-There is no fear of that. Of this, the Era says, "the Republican party will pursue the policy it has inaugurated, carry out the principles it has proclaimed, elect a and administer the Federal Government in obedience thereto, and the South will conform to the new order of things. Finding that not one of its constitutional gandism and sectional ambition that have gandism and sectional ambition that have disgraced it, no adequate cause for incurring the guilt of rebellion and the horrible hazards of civil war. Rich Legacies. The Syracuse Standard says that two enterprising young merchants of that city, Messrs. Morris and Gardiner, who keep a variety store, have recently received intelligence that they are heirs in the direct line to a large amount of money and property in England. The whole amount is about fifty millions of pounds sterling, and it is believed there are not more than two hundred descendants to claim a share, giving each person more than half a million of dollars. An eminent lawyer in New York has been en. gaged for some time past, in investigating the claim, and it is understood that the matter is now near its conclusion.
